Kiernan Shipka in “Industry”

Money makes the world go ‘round. We all know the phrase, but now more than ever, wealth — and the wealth gap — has become a central part of our social and political discourse. In a world where billionaires run everything from marathons to entire countries, there exists, for better or for worse, a cultural obsession with “the haves,” and television remains the perfect medium to explore extreme money-making ventures from the comfort of one’s own couch.

This new year, HBO’s hit financial business drama “Industry” begins its fourth season. Don’t miss your chance to buy in when it premieres Sunday, Jan. 11, on HBO and HBO Max.

Following the success of other top-rated business series such as “Suits,” “Billions” and “Succession,” “Industry” follows a group of up-and-coming bankers and financial traders who are hoping to make it big and land the job of a lifetime following another major catastrophe: the 2008 recession. Counting Myha’la (“Leave the World Behind,” 2023), Sagar Radia (“The Good Karma Hospital”), Marisa Abela (“Back to Black,” 2024) and Ken Leung (“Lost”) among the main cast, “Industry” has seen significant growth in viewership since it released its third season in September 2024.

“For three seasons, ‘Industry’ has been unflinching in its examination of ambition and class, solidifying itself as a marquee HBO drama,” Francesca Orsi, executive vice-president of HBO Programming and head of HBO drama series and films, wrote in a statement to the media. “Under Mickey [Down] and Konrad [Kay]’s [both of “Hoff the Record”] singular vision, this twisted, thrilling look at London finance has redefined the contemporary workplace show.

“We’re so excited that viewers and critics have recognized Season 3 as bigger and better than ever, buoyed by sublime performances from our unparalleled cast.”

For those who may not recall, Season 3 ended as (spoilers!) Rishi (Radia) defaulted on his debts to some seedy loan sharks and his wife (Emily Barber, “MobLand”) was murdered in return. As Rishi faced the life-altering consequences of his pecuniary choices, Yasmin (Abela) accepted a proposal from old money Lumi CEO Henry Muck (Kit Harington, “Game of Thrones”), further solidifying her rise in status by association. Harper (Myha’la), meanwhile, was also on the rise in the Season 3 finale, thanks to her funds secured by Robert’s (Harry Lawtey, “Joker: Folie à Deux,” 2024) godfather, Otto (Roger Barclay, “The Bay”), and her ambition to tackle the American market from her native New York.

Robert, too, is stateside, having left the U.K. after one final tryst with Yasmin. And, given that he has now settled in a cushy Silicon Valley job out west, Deadline has confirmed that Lawtey’s character will not be returning for Season 4. Myha’la, Abela, Harington, Radia, Leung and Barclay are all returning, however, as are Miriam Petcher (“The Worst Witch”) and Andrew Havill (“The King’s Speech,” 2010).

As for what the future of the series has in store for fans of the show, writer-creators Down and Kay told Elle that they have “broadened the canvas again,” claiming that the eight-episode season “should make for the most compulsively watchable week-to-week viewing experience we’ve presented since we first aired.”

In the same Elle exclusive interview, the pair noted that the new plot points have “slotted seamlessly into the ‘Industry’ universe” and “made it feel richer than ever.”

Be sure to invest in Season 4 of “Industry” when it premieres Sunday, Jan. 11, on HBO and HBO Max.

'Supernatural' happenings can be found elsewhere now

Q: I've noticed that "Supernatural" isn't on Netflix anymore. Is there any place else where I can stream it? — Tracy Mann, via e-mail

A: Actually, two places. Part of the reason the long-running horror drama left its longtime home at Netflix was that it moved to Prime Video at the start of December, and all 15 seasons of the show — which was a staple series for The CW — now can be found there. And that's not the only place. Jensen Ackles and Jared Padalecki's adventures as the demon-fighting Winchester siblings can also be found on Peacock.

With all that activity in the digital space, "Supernatural" also has left TNT, where it had linear showings on weekday mornings for quite some time. The streaming revolution has indicated to studios where they can best monetize their properties, so you largely can chalk up the changes on where that show is now seen to that. To cover for the absence of "Supernatural," TNT has expanded the repeat schedule for the original "Charmed" and has added "FBI" reruns to the lineup.

It also should be mentioned that the complete "Supernatural" series also is available on DVD and Blu-ray, and a check of online merchants shows that it's very available in those formats.

Q: It was good to see "The China Syndrome" on Turner Classic Movies recently. Was that Wilford Brimley's first movie? — Roger Page, Elyria, Ohio

A: He'd had small roles in several films earlier, all of them Westerns, including the original version of "True Grit" (1969) that earned John Wayne an Oscar for best actor. He also had been a stunt performer in that genre, and "The China Syndrome" (1979) generally is acknowledged to have given him his first prominent movie part. However, he'd also had a recurring TV role on CBS' "The Waltons" as blacksmith Horace Brimley (and the last name was hardly a coincidence).

The impact Brimley had in "The China Syndrome" can be gauged from all the film opportunities that opened up for him immediately afterward. After appearing later that year opposite Jane Fonda again in "The Electric Horseman," he racked up such credits as "Brubaker" (1980), "Absence of Malice" (1981), "The Thing" (1982), "Tender Mercies" (1983), "The Natural" (1984) and "Cocoon" (1985). He then took the only starring role he had in a television series, in NBC's "Our House," which also featured Shannen Doherty and "Days of Our Lives" icon Deidre Hall.

Other notable movie credits for Brimley — who died in 2020 — include "The Firm" (1993), "My Fellow Americans" (1996) and "In & Out" (1997). On TV, he also made a big mark in a 1997 "Seinfeld" episode by playing America's postmaster general, who opposed Kramer's (Michael Richards) campaign to warn the public that the sending of catalogs and other advertising allegedly was some sort of conspiracy.

Barbra Streisand in “Funny Girl”

BEST BARBRA STREISAND MOVIES

“Funny Girl” (1968): Streisand exploded onto the movie scene by reprising her Broadway part as entertainer Fanny Brice, winning an Oscar for best actress (tied with Katharine Hepburn for 1968’s “The Lion in Winter”) for the performance — which includes “People,” “Don’t Rain on My Parade” and “My Man” among the song highlights.

“Hello, Dolly!” (1969): All of Hollywood wanted to be in business with Streisand, and she opted to stay with stage-musical adaptations as late-19th-century matchmaker Dolly Levi in this winner of three Academy Awards, directed by Gene Kelly.

“What’s Up, Doc?” (1972): Director Peter Bogdanovich had a stellar teaming in Streisand and Ryan O’Neal in this homage to screwball comedies set during a conclave for musicologists in San Francisco.

“The Way We Were” (1973): A blockbuster hit for Streisand and Robert Redford, director Sydney Pol-lack’s romantic drama casts them as college classmates who embark on a tumultuous relationship in later years. Streisand also performs the Oscar-winning title song.

“A Star Is Born” (1976): This rock-music-oriented version of a much-filmed tale features Streisand as a singer who’s on the rise while her former-superstar husband’s (Kris Kristofferson) career is on the downslide. The love theme “Evergreen,” which Streisand co-wrote, earned an Academy Award.

“Yentl” (1983): Streisand made her directing debut with this adaptation of an Isaac Bashevis Singer story, in which she also stars as a young woman who disguises herself as a man so she can study the Talmud. The picture was Oscar-honored for its music.

“Nuts” (1987): Tom Topor’s play was brought to the screen with Streisand as a prostitute whose sanity is questioned in a court case after she kills one of her clients (Leslie Nielsen). Richard Dreyfuss also stars as the public defender who takes her case.

“The Prince of Tides” (1991): Streisand doubled as star and director again for this moving version of Pat Conroy’s novel, with Nick Nolte excellent as a Southern educator who clashes with the New York psychiatrist (Streisand) treating his twin sister (Melinda Dillon), a would-be suicide. Turner Classic Movies shows the film Friday, Jan. 16.

“Meet the Fockers” (2004): Streisand joined the “Meet the Parents” comedy franchise as the mother of Ben Stiller’s character, and as of this writing, it hadn’t been solidly confirmed whether she’ll return in the forthcoming chapter titled “Focker-in-Law.”

“The Guilt Trip” (2012): In her last movie to date, Streisand is entertaining as a woman who goes on a cross-country trek with her son (Seth Rogen), who has an ulterior motive for inviting her along.

Checking in with

ANTHONY ANDERSON

Some people still may know Anthony Anderson for his sitcom and drama work, but when it comes to hosting contests, he's game.

ABC's "Black-ish" and NBC and Peacock's "Law & Order" are among the scripted series that the actor-comedian-producer is familiar for, but the competition and game show space also has been occupying a sizable percentage of his career in recent years. He continues to prove that by hosting a Netflix revival of "Star Search" that will stream live on Tuesdays and Wednesdays, starting Jan. 13.

As with the original syndicated version that Ed McMahon ("Fun With Dick and Jane," 1977) hosted from 1983 to 1995 — joined by MTV icon Martha Quinn ("Motorama," 1991) in the final season — and a 2003-04 edition that Arsenio Hall ("The Arsenio Hall Show") hosted on CBS, the show lets aspiring talents from various entertainment disciplines (music, dance, humor, etc.) try out for a studio audience and on-the-set judges. Viewers will also be able to participate via real-time voting for their favorites.

"Star Search" gives an early platform to potentially future celebrities as it did for Justin Timberlake ("Sexy Back"), Britney Spears ("Oops!... I did it Again"), Adam Sandler ("Happy Gilmore," 1996), Usher ("Yeah!"), Christina Aguilera ("Genie in a Bottle"), LeAnn Rimes ("I Need You"), Dave Chappelle ("Chappelle's Show"), Ray Romano ("Everybody Loves Raymond!"), Brad Garrett ("Not Dead Yet"), Billy Porter ("Pose") and Sawyer Brown ("Step That Step"), who all were present in the first two incarnations. Host Anderson (who reportedly will make a guest appearance in "The Neighborhood's" 150th episode this spring on CBS and Paramount+) knows how that goes, since his initial efforts in comedy clubs weren't fruitful, but he credits friend and fellow actor Guy Torry ("Good News") with convincing him to keep trying.

Clearly that paid off, and Anderson's knack for impromptu comedy has suited him well for the hosting jobs he also has filled on ABC's "To Tell the Truth" and Fox's "We Are Family," both of which gave him a co-host in his mother, Doris

Bowman. He also has turned up often as a player of games including ABC's "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire" and "The $100,000 Pyramid" and NBC's "Hollywood Game Night," so it's apparent that a competitive spirit appeals to Anderson, which should make him feel right at home on the new "Star Search."

The cast of "That Thing You Do!"

'That Thing You Do!' is Tom Hanks' thing

With two Oscars as best actor to his name, Tom Hanks could write whatever ticket he wanted for himself in Hollywood by the time he wrote and directed "That Thing You Do!," his hugely entertaining 1996 comedy about a 1960s pop-music group that ABC shows Sunday, Jan. 11. He also co-stars as a savvy talent agent who becomes the manager of The Wonders, a band that has local Pennsylvania success thanks largely to a replacement drummer (played by Tom Everett Scott) who raises the group's presence by giving their music a different beat, very literally.

Johnathon Schaech, Steve Zahn and Ethan Embry play the other Wonders, with Liv Tyler as the girlfriend of the band's resident songwriter (Schaech) — and the result of all of their efforts is a nostalgic and genuinely fun confection with a soundtrack that has endured by cleverly mirroring familiar '60s hits. Also notable in the cast is Charlize Theron, in an early role as the drummer's love interest, who eventually finds that she prefers a hunky dentist to her musically inclined

"The King of Queens" (Cozi TV, daily): Kevin James had appeared on friend Ray Romano's series "Everybody Loves Raymond" before landing his own CBS sitcom, which had a healthy nine-season run (1998-2007). He plays amiable delivery man Doug, who frequently engages in loving bickering with wife Carrie (Leah Remini), whose father Arthur (Jerry Stiller) resides in the basement of the couple's home and shares his daughter's penchant for highly opinionated comments. Victor Williams and Patton Oswalt also are among the cast members.

"Going Dutch" - Season 2 (Jan. 16)

Reassigned to the Netherlands as a punishment, loudmouth U.S. Army Colonel Patrick Quinn (Denis Leary) is at the least important army base in the world. Now in charge of a base with no guns, no weapons and no tactical purpose, and instead equipped with a Michelin-star-level commissary, top-notch bowling alley and the best (and only) fromagerie in the U.S. Army, Quinn is surrounded by a diverse group of underdogs as he tries to reinstall military discipline and professionalism. Taylor Misiak, Danny Pudi and Laci Mosley also star.

Celebrity cook-off: 'Worst Cooks in America' welcomes reality TV stars to the kitchen

BY CAROLINE COLLACUTT

Ten television personalities test out their skills in the kitchen during "Worst Cooks in America: Reality Check," which airs a new episode on Food Network this Sunday, Jan. 11.

While they might be talented in their field of work, these all-stars will be transformed from "cooking disasters" to kitchen masters, according to Food Network, as mentoring chefs Jeff Mauro ("The Kitchen") and Tiffany Derry ("The Great American Recipe") share skills, techniques and recipes that (hopefully) strengthen their culinary chops.

The stars in question include Lisa Barlow ("The Real Housewives of Salt Lake City"), Val Chmerkovskiy ("Dancing With the Stars"), Reza Farahan ("The Valley: Persian Style"), Amara La Negra ("Love & Hip Hop: Miami"), Manila Luzon ("RuPaul's Drag Race"), Beverley Mitchell ("7th Heaven"), CT Tamburello ("The Traitors USA"), Romeo Miller ("Growing Up Hip Hop"), Downtown

Julie Brown ("Club MTV") and Olympic swimmer Ryan Lochte.

During the season's premiere episode — which aired Jan. 4 — the recruits took part in a baseline challenge, which saw the celebs making red carpet-worthy dishes that showcased their maker's strengths and weaknesses. Afterwards, in the main dish challenge, the competitors were split into teams (one led by Mauro and another by Derry) and taught how to make spicy piri piri chicken.

"Some recruits rise to the occasion, while others fizzle out," Food Network teased.

Week by week, players will be eliminated until only two remain. As the season's most-improved recruits, these finalists must create a three-course, restaurant-quality meal for a panel of surprise guest judges. The winning contestant will earn themselves $25,000 for charity and, of course, bragging rights — for both themselves and for their team's leader.
