Documentary on skate art icon premieres July 24 in Muskegon

ARTICLE SUBMITTED

MUSKEGON, Mich. — The Muskegon Museum of Art will host the Michigan premiere of Art and Life: The Story of Jim Phillips, a documentary chronicling the life and legacy of the legendary graphic artist whose vibrant, high-energy style helped define skateboarding culture.

The screening will take place Thursday, July 24, from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the museum, located at 296 W. Webster Ave. The event is free and open to the public, with seating available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Phillips, a pioneering force in rock poster, surf, and skateboard art, began his career in 1962 and rose to prominence as art director for Santa Cruz Skateboards. His iconic work became synonymous with the golden era of skateboarding, merging bold colors, kinetic compositions, and counterculture aesthetics.

The film, directed by John Makens, explores Phillips' career trajectory—from his Santa Cruz roots to the rise and fall of Phillips Studios, and his eventual return to rock poster art through freelance work. It also delves into the challenges behind his success, including the pressures of commercial demand and personal resilience.

Art and Life: The Story of Jim Phillips features appearances by Jim Phillips himself as well as cultural and industry figures such as Neil Young, Rich Novak, Eric Dressen, Jeff Grosso, Rob Roskopp, Steve Alba, Jeff Kendall, Chad Muska, and Dolly Phillips.

Produced by Makens, Phillips, Pierre Minhondo, and Justin Fann, the documentary showcases editing by Fann and Minhondo, cinematography by Chris Patterson, and motion graphics by Daniel Zvereff, Joe Pease, and Mattheus Macedo.

The screening is presented by Little Cabin Films, a Muskegon-based production company founded in 2009 by filmmakers Andrew J. Morgan and Nick Nummerdor. Known for their grassroots beginnings in skate videos, the pair have since produced several acclaimed documentaries, including Sleeze Lake, Vannin' and Concrete Dreams.

A vigilante killer rises again in 'Dexter: Resurrection'

A new, old life begins for one once-dead forensic analyst-turned-small town sporting goods store clerk with a dark secret. After his life in New York state as Jim Lindsay unraveled, the past has come back to haunt Dexter Morgan (Michael C. Hall, "Six Feet Under") in "Dexter: Resurrection." The first two episodes of the series are available to stream now on Paramount+ with the Showtime plan, with their broadcast network debut taking place Sunday, July 13, on Paramount+ with Showtime.

In the series, Dexter makes a narrow escape from the events of "Dexter: New Blood" and sets off towards New York City, in part to try to reach his son, Harrison (Jack Alcott, "The Good Lord Bird"). Having been tipped off that Dexter is still alive and that he is likely to have been responsible for the Bay Harbour Butcher murders in Miami years ago, Angel Batista (David Zayas, "The Bear"), now captain of homicide of the Miami Metro Police, heads north to confront his former colleague.

"Dexter: Resurrection" also stars Ntare Guma Mbaho Mwine ("The Lincoln Lawyer") as rideshare driver Blessing Kamara; Kadia Saraf ("The Better Sister") as Det. Claudette Wallace; Dominic

James Remar and Michael C. Hall in "Dexter: Resurrection"

Fumusa ("Nurse Jackie") as Det. Melvin Oliva; and Emilia Suarez ("Up Here") as Harrison's friend Elsa Rivera. Also back from the dead in guest roles to revive characters from the original series are John Lithgow ("The Old Man") as Arthur Mitchell, the Trinity Killer; Jimmy Smits ("Obi-Wan Kenobi") as Miguel Prado, the assistant district attorney with a dark secret; and Erik King ("The Good Fight") as Det. James Doakes, long thought to be the Bay Harbour Butcher.

This installment of the Dexter franchise boasts some exciting guest stars who may or may not entice Dexter's dark passenger into action. Neil Patrick Harris ("Uncoupled") is Lowell; David Dastmalchian ("Oppenheimer," 2023) is Gareth; Eric Stonestreet ("American Auto") is Al; and Krysten Ritter ("Orphan Black: Echoes") is Mia.

Dexter Morgan's resurrection comes after he faked his death in the finale of the original "Dexter," then was revealed to have been living low as Jim in "Dexter: New Blood." In Iron Lake, New York, Dexter had been living like a man in recovery as Jim, honoring the routine of daily life that kept his deepest desires at bay. A tense moment forced him to live, once again, by the code he thought he could suppress, sending his new life into a spiral.

The unexpected arrival of Harrison, the expectations of fatherhood that came with him and Dexter's own crimes scratching the surface of long-buried secrets in Iron Lake combined in an explosive finale. Father and son, both plagued by murderous tendencies, dramatically part ways — Harrison in hopes of living a different, better life than Dexter.

Resuscitating their relationship is central to "Dexter: Resurrection," Hall told Vanity Fair in April. "Harrison revealed himself to be, and remains, an all-the-more potent connection to Dexter's tiny sense of humanity. He craves it, in spite of himself, so it's a major bolt of thread running through his interior life and the life of the season."

'Fursuit' wearing vigilantes save the day in new docuseries

A welcoming and inclusive community faces its darkness, uncovering a horrific pattern of abuse taking place within, during "The Furry Detectives: Unmasking a Monster," an all-new docuseries making its debut Thursday, July 17, on Sundance TV, Sundance Now and AMC+.

From director Theo Love ("Eat the Rich: The GameStop Saga"), this four-part docuseries exposes the dark and brutal underbelly of a seemingly harmless community known as Furies. Composed of people who are interested in anthropomorphic animals — animals that possess human-like characteristics, including the ability to talk or walk on two legs — and, for some, in wearing elaborate, full-bodied animal costumes called fursuits, the Furry community is often a safe haven for people of all ages, races, religions, sexes and genders, offering a sense of anonymity and equality to those within. As with all communities, however, not all members arrive with the same good intentions.

Enter: the Zoosadists.

Known as the 2018 "Furry Zoosadist Leaks," this spectacle saw Furry community members — described by Sundance TV as "dedicated vigilantes" — working alongside police to expose, per the network, "a horrifying conspiracy of animal abuse lurking beneath the Fandom's playful exterior," when it became apparent that certain members of the local Furry community had been sharing sadistic and graphic videos of animal abuse and torture online. This group of fursuit-wearing vigilantes, dubbed "The Furvengers," utilized the help of the Pennsylvania police to then eradicate these abusive members from their community.

"The series follows the pack of dedicated vigilantes who teamed up to bring down the monsters behind the masks," Sundance TV explains in a press release regarding the series. "Navigating the line between amateur sleuthing and official police investigation, the Furry Detectives exposed a ring of animal abusers, fought for victims and defended their community from the evil within."

From Jigsaw Productions, in association with Razan Ghalayini ("Full Frontal with Samantha Bee"), Julia Lindau ("VICE News: The Battle Over Psychedelic Therapy's Future," 2022), Richard Perello ("The Dark Money Game") and Taylor Rogers ("Operation Undercover"), "The Furry Detectives: Unmasking a Monster" premieres Thursday, July 17, on Sundance TV, Sundance Now and AMC+.

"Apocalypse in the Tropics" (July 14)

When does a democracy end, and a theocracy begin? Petra Costa investigates the increasingly powerful grip that Christian evangelical leaders hold over politics in Brazil, gaining extraordinary access to the country's top political leaders, including President Lula and former President Bolsonaro, as well as to Brazil's most famous televangelist: a magnetic pastor who aspires to play puppet master to the far-right leader. The film chronicles the profound role the evangelical movement has played in Brazil's recent political turmoil, and it also grapples with the apocalyptic theology that drives the movement's chief protagonists.

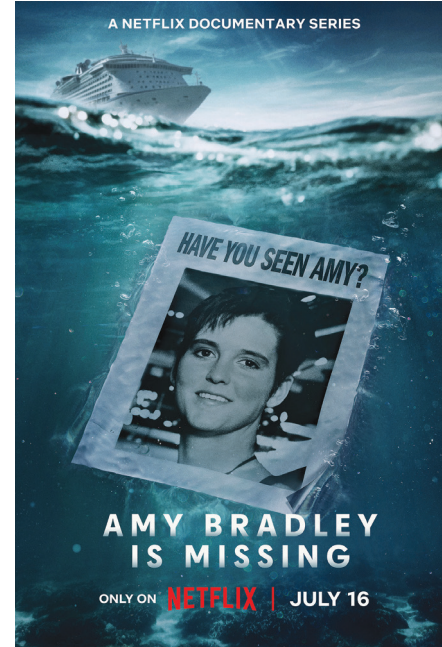

"Sakamoto Days" - Season 1, Part 2 (July 14)

Based on the hit manga of the same name written and illustrated by Yuto Suzuki, the series follows the story of Taro Sakamoto (voiced by Tomokazu Sugita), a legendary ex-hitman. After falling in love and building a family, Taro has left his violent past in the rearview to embrace a quiet, happy existence. But, when the looming threat of assassins begins to cloud over and endanger the peaceful life he's built with his family, Taro bands together with his cohorts and brings his long-buried skills back into play to face off against their enemies.

"Trainwreck: Balloon Boy" (July 15)

On October 15, 2009, a father in Fort Collins Colorado calls 911, claiming that his home-made flying saucer has escaped from the back yard, carrying his six-year-old son inside. This stranger-than-fiction claim is backed up by footage from a news helicopter, which catches up with the balloon and is live-streaming the chase. What starts as a local emergency quickly escalates into a national one, as everyone from the National Guard, to the Sheriff, and Homeland Security, struggles to come up with a plan to safely rescue "Balloon Boy."

"Amy Bradley Is Missing" (July 16)

On March 23, 1998, 23-year-old Amy Bradley disappears without a trace from the cruise ship she and her family were vacationing on. Despite thorough searches of the ship, Amy is nowhere to be found and the cruise has already docked in their next port, Curacao, opening the door for 2400 passengers to explore the island and allowing Amy to potentially disappear into the crowd. Hours later, Amy is still nowhere to be found and fear sets in that Amy may have fallen overboard before port.

Though it plays somewhat fast and loose with the business of journalism, "State of Play" is a compelling drama.

Adapted, condensed and quite Americanized from a limited British television series, the 2009 drama — being shown by Cinemax on Monday, July 14 and Thursday, July 17 — benefits from a very strong cast led by Russell Crowe as a veteran Washington, D.C., newspaper reporter who takes a personal interest in the story of a politician (Ben Affleck) who's a longtime friend. An aide to the married congressman dies under mysterious circumstances, and when he admits to having had an affair with her, the plot does indeed thicken.

The rough-around-the-edges journalist advises his friend on how to handle the matter while also investigating the situation professionally, a duality that worries the reporter's senior editor (Helen Mirren), who wants a clearly sourced story that will sell papers and satisfy the new publishers. To that end, she also assigns a blogger (Rachel McAdams) to look into the death, a move that irritates Crowe's character

... until he and the blog writer make a pact to work together.

While its plot becomes dense with detail, also factoring in the reporter's past with the politician's wife (Robin Wright) and an oily publicist's (Jason Bateman) role in the situation, "State of Play" holds interest through the sheer presence of its performers. Also on hand are Jeff Daniels as another congressman who tries to keep his hands clean, and Harry Lennix as a police detective who knows all too well how Crowe's alter ego operates.

Actual reporters are likely to shake their heads at some of the actions their on-screen surrogates take in "State of Play," ranging from withholding information from cops, to entering a private hospital room to questioning a shooting victim while doctors are tending to him. That being said, the actors' commitment to their roles goes a long way here. It may not be until the final credits roll — after an entire newsroom staff has stopped to watch a peer type an article — that a viewer stops and thinks, "Hey, wait a minute."

Her future seems set, until some core-shaking events bring her first love, Conrad (Christopher Briney), back into her life. Now on the brink of adulthood, Belly finds herself at a crossroads and must decide which brother has her heart.

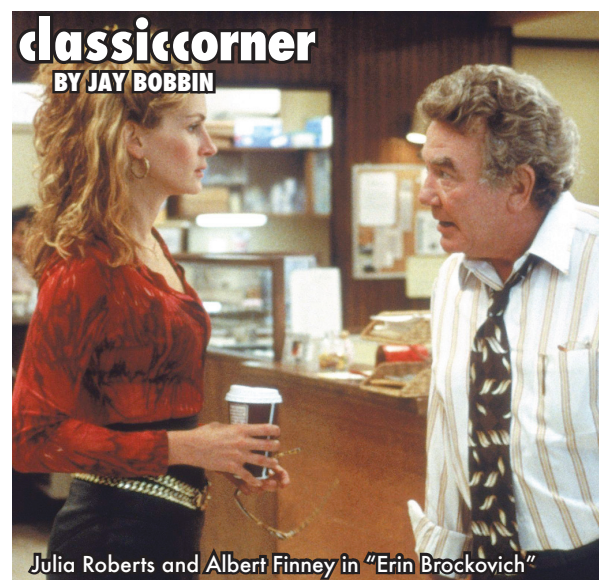

“Follow” (“Juegos de seducción”) (July 19)

Sebastian (Diego Boneta) is a master con artist who seduces wealthy women to steal their money — until a chance encounter with Carolina (Martha Higareda), an enigmatic woman who pulls him into a passionate affair. But, his next mark turns out to be her husband: a dangerous and powerful man who could bring everything crashing down.

“Menem” (Available Now)

A fictional drama based on true events, “Menem” tells the story of a family from La Rioja whose life is linked to the intimate circle of President Carlos Menem (Leonardo Sbaraglia). The series is set in 1990s Argentina, following Menem's rise to power and the consequent economic convertibility to the terrorist attacks that took place in Buenos Aires. Menem is the story of power, political controversy and social tragedy.

Julia Roberts earned an Oscar as ‘Erin Brockovich’

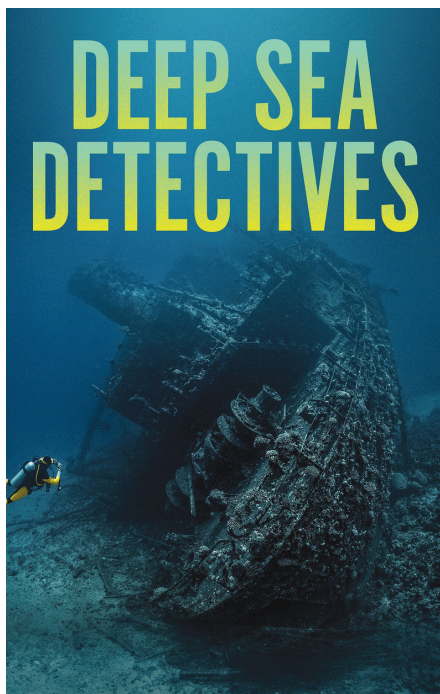

Thanks to such huge successes as “Pretty Woman” and “My Best Friend's Wedding,” Julia Roberts pretty much had her choice of roles by the time the title part in “Erin Brockovich” came her way. The fact-based 2000 drama will be shown Wednesday, July 16, on Starz Encore and Thursday, July 17, on Starz — with Roberts in an engaging, commanding and ultimately Oscar-winning portrayal of a single mother who finds work with an attorney (an also-excellent Albert Finney) and takes up a case of alleged groundwater contamination.

For any and all setbacks, the duo remains committed to getting a sizable settlement for the plaintiffs, who number more than 600. Director Steven Soderbergh and screenwriter Susannah Grant also delve into Erin's personal life, with Aaron Eckhart doing fine work as her unconventional boyfriend. Clearly a great showcase for Roberts, the picture's popularity expectedly raised the profile of the real-life Brockovich and her further crusades for justice. Marg Helgenberger, Peter Coyote, Cherry Jones and Conchata Ferrell are among other notable cast members.

more retro rewinds

“Mama's Family” (Catchy Comedy, Sunday, July 13): “The Carol Burnett Show” yielded this spinoff series that gets an all-day “Binge” marathon (it also runs weekdays on the channel), with a heavily made-up Vicki Lawrence as the sassy Mama, the matriarch of a Southern family that engages regularly in pointed barbs. Burnett, Harvey Korman and Betty White were recurring guest stars, but the humor was left largely to a weekly cast that also included Ken Berry, Dorothy Lyman and (in the first two seasons) a pre-“Golden Girls” Rue McClanahan. The sitcom launched on NBC in 1983-84, then resumed very successfully in first-run syndication from 1986 to 1990.

Audrey Hepburn and Gregory Peck in "Roman Holiday"

"Roman Holiday" (1953): Though she had done several pictures earlier, Hepburn's first major showcase — her first of several teamings with director William Wyler — brought her an Oscar for best actress as an AWOL princess escorted through Rome by a reporter (Gregory Peck). Filmed on location, the picture is Turner Classic Movies' "Summer Romance" attraction on Sunday, July 13.

"Sabrina" (1954): Director and co-screenwriter Billy Wilder's comedy casts Hepburn in the title role of a chauffeur's daughter who complicates life for her father's employers, wealthy brothers (Humphrey Bogart, William Holden).

"War and Peace" (1956): This epic staging of Leo Tolstoy's novel about love and power in early 19th-century Russia cast Hepburn opposite her then-husband, Mel Ferrer, as well as Henry Fonda.

"Funny Face" (1957): Hepburn is delightful in director Stanley Donen's musical-comedy, playing a bookstore operator whose shop becomes the setting for a fashion photographer's (Fred Astaire) shoot.

"The Nun's Story" (1959): An excellent Hepburn portrays a novice nun who faces many challenges as she struggles to honor her vows.

"The Children's Hour" (1961): Reuniting with director Wyler, Hepburn teams with Shirley Maclaine to play boarding-school operators who contend with a student's (Karen Balkin) accusation.

"Breakfast at Tiffany's" (1961): The role of socialite Holly Golightly became a milestone for Hepburn in this Blake Edwards-directed adaptation of a Truman Capote novella. The Henry Mancini score introduced the song "Moon River," which Hepburn performs.

"Charade" (1963): A blueprint for romantic comedy-thrillers was set by director Donen's film about a widow (Hepburn) pursued by various people — including one played by Cary Grant — for knowledge of her late husband's dealings.

"My Fair Lady" (1964): Julie Andrews plays Eliza Doolittle on Broadway, but Hepburn assumed the role for this classic Lerner and Loewe musical on film ... with Andrews winning the best actress Oscar for its year (for "Mary Poppins"). Rex Harrison took the best actor honor for reprising his stage part as Professor Henry Higgins.

"How to Steal a Million" (1966): Working with director Wyler again, Hepburn plays the daughter of an art forger (Hugh Griffith) who tries to keep him out of trouble, with help from a thief (Peter O'Toole).

“Justice on Trial” - Season 1 (Prime Video — July 21, Series Premiere)

Judge Judy Sheindlin puts the American justice system on trial in a true crime, high-stakes courtroom drama, as she and her expert legal team recreate the trials from notorious cases where the letter of the law dictates that “justice” doesn’t always feel “just.” In every episode, Judge Sheindlin plays the lower court judge, while her “Tribunal Justice” judges Tanya Acker, Patricia DiMango and Adam Levy preside over all appeals court cases.

“Acapulco” - Season 4 (Apple TV+ — July 23, Season Premiere)

In Season 4, present-day Maximo (Eugenio Derbez) works tirelessly to restore Las Colinas to its former glory before the grand reopening. In 1986, when a competitor claims the number one spot in the annual ranking of Acapulco’s “Best Hotels,” young Máximo (Enrique Arrizon) will do whatever it takes to get back on top and secure Las Colinas’ future.

A 'Cleaning' sweep: Why a Fox show won't be back

Q: Why was "The Cleaning Lady" canceled? — Jill Victor, via e-mail

A: Fox decided to end the Elodie Yung-starring show after its fourth season because of lowered ratings. The producers were banking on — or at least hoping for — a renewal, based on the loose ends that were left in what turned out to be the series finale, but that wasn't to be. The drama performed well in its first two years, but a decline in viewership became evident during Season 3. The ratings for "The Cleaning Lady" bumped back up a bit in Season 4, but in the end, they weren't enough for Fox to recommit to the show ... which had also undergone a creative shift sadly necessitated by the 2024 death of co-star Adan Canto. Several days after the last episode aired in June, the verdict was announced.
