Before Baker St.: New series follows a 'Young Sherlock'

One particular character, famed detective Sherlock Holmes, has stood the test of time better than most. Although the clever Englishman was brought to life 139 years ago by Scottish author and physician Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, fans of the fictional investigator are still clawing at page and screen for more. Luckily for them, the adaptations just keep coming.

"Young Sherlock," a new Sherlock Holmes prequel series from grungy British filmmaker Guy Ritchie ("Snatch," 2000), premieres Wednesday, March 4, on Prime Video.

Split into eight episodes, all of which are to be released at once, "Young Sherlock" stars Hero Fiennes Tiffin ("The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare," 2024) as the titular budding brainiac. Nephew to actors Ralph Fiennes ("28 Years Later," 2025) and Joseph Fiennes ("The Handmaid's Tale"), Fiennes Tiffin's breakout role came in 2009 when he was cast as the 11-year-old version of Tom Riddle in "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince," the sixth film in the eight-film series. Now, he stars as another young icon — albeit one much more benevolent despite his earmark troublemaking and audacity.

"Sherlock Holmes is a disgraced young man — raw and unfiltered — when he finds himself wrapped up in a murder case that threatens his liberty," reads the official series description, as reported by The Hollywood Reporter. "His first ever case unravels a globe-trotting conspiracy that changes his life forever. Unfolding in 1870s Oxford and adventuring abroad, the series will expose the early antics of the anarchic adolescent who is yet to evolve into Baker Street's most renowned resident."

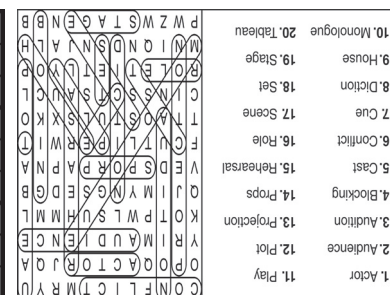

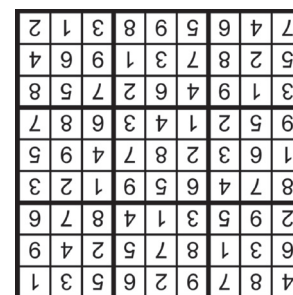

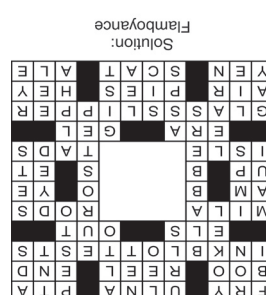

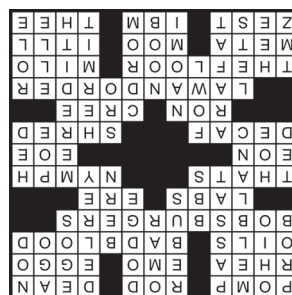

Although this will be Fiennes Tiffin's first time portraying Sherlock, series director Ritchie is hardly new to the world of Holmes. Having previously helmed the 2009 movie "Sherlock Holmes" and its 2011 sequel, "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows," both of which starred recovering bad boys Robert Downey Jr. ("Iron Man," 2008) and Jude Law

("The Talented Mr. Ripley," 1999), the series' trailer illustrates that Ritchie plans to bring the same signature grit to "Young Sherlock" as the leading man works to solve an on-campus murder whilst trying to pass classes despite his penchant for questioning authority.

Created by Matthew Parkhill ("Rogue") and based on the "Young Sherlock Holmes" book series by Andrew Lane, "Young Sherlock" also stars Donal Finn ("The Wheel of Time") as James Moriarty, Colin Firth ("The King's Speech," 2010) as Sir Bucephalus Hodge, Max Irons ("Condor") as Mycroft Holmes, Natascha McElhone ("Californication") as Cordelia Holmes, Ravi Aujla ("Slow Horses") stars as Kishore Malik and new talent Zine Tseng as Princess Gulun Shou'an. Joseph Fiennes and Holly Cattle ("Cobra") also star.

Don't miss your chance to travel back in time to witness the birth of a brilliant mind when "Young Sherlock" drops all eight episodes Wednesday, March 4, on Prime Video.

A memory of an earlier Patrick Dempsey role

Q: It's good to see Patrick Dempsey back on TV in "Memory of a Killer." Someone told me that he once played President John F. Kennedy, but I don't remember it. When was that? — Christine Brown, Buffalo, N.Y.

A: That was some time ago, when Patrick Dempsey was mainly doing feature films at the front end of his career ... but he took a then-rare television role in the 1993 ABC miniseries "JFK: Reckless Youth," in which he played Kennedy as a young man from the time he was a student to his run for a congressional seat in Massachusetts. The drama was based on a same-named book by Nigel Hamilton, who co-wrote the teleplay.

Patrick Dempsey in "Memory of a Killer"

After that project, Dempsey made TV more of a regular part of his job mix, following it with adaptations of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" and "Crime and Punishment." He also did guest turns on such series as NBC's "Will & Grace" and ABC's "Once and Again" and "The Practice." Of course, he would get an even greater lesson in how valuable a series could be to an actor when he became Dr. Derek "McDreamy" Shepherd on ABC's "Grey's Anatomy" in 2005.

Q: I heard that Dermot Mulroney is leaving "Chicago Fire." Why? He hasn't been there all that long. — Clark Wills, via e-mail

Among others playing members of the iconically political Kennedy family were Terry Kinney (who appeared in the movie version of John Grisham's "The Firm" the same year), Loren Dean, Rob in Tunney, Malachy McCourt, Diana Scarwid ("Mommie Dearest," 1981) and Natalie Radford.

A: Dermot Mulroney's slated to be in at least one more episode of the NBC and Peacock drama's current season, part of the crossover story involving all of the "One Chicago" series on Wednesday, March 4. Reportedly, a plot development for his Chief Dom Pascal character is what will take him out of the show for the remainder of the season, with Rob Morgan then coming into the program as another chief who has been at several other Chicago firehouses.

As has been mentioned here before, the Dick Wolf-produced NBC shows (also including those in the "Law & Order" franchise) have been managing their budgets by having most cast regulars sit out several episodes, so Mulroney's upcoming absence could be another measure of that. It appears that he has gotten along famously with his fellow "Chicago Fire" stars, as affirmed by a recent photo on social media that showed a number of them (including Mulroney) having a very cheerful time during a dinner out together.

"The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1939): With the Prime Video series "Young Sherlock" starting Wednesday, March 4, it's a good time to look back at other screen representations of master sleuth Sherlock Holmes ... including this first of 14 teamings of Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce as Holmes and his dedicated investigative partner Dr. John Watson. The Sir Arthur Conan Doyle story has them probing a supposed curse that plagues a privileged family; John Carradine also is in the cast.

"The Hound of the Baskervilles" (1959): Peter Cushing and Andre Morell assumed the Holmes and Watson roles in this remake, marking the first time a movie in the franchise was in color.

BEST SHERLOCK HOLMES MOVIES

Christopher Lee plays a prominent member of the troubled family at the heart of the tale. "They Might Be Giants" (1971): Holmes is a character in this comedy-drama insofar as the central character — a judge played by George C. Scott — who imagines himself to be the sleuth. However, he really has a Watson, a psychiatrist by that name who's portrayed by Joanne Woodward. James Goldman adapted his stage play for the film. "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" (1976): Nicholas Meyer adapted his bestseller for this Herbert Ross-directed film version that sees a drug-addicted Holmes (Nicol Williamson) being treated by Sigmund Freud (Alan Arkin) while the detective continues to pursue Moriarty (Laurence Olivier). Robert Duvall plays Watson in a cast that also includes Joel Grey, Samantha Eggar and — as Mycroft Holmes — Charles Gray ("Diamonds Are Forever," 1971).

"Young Sherlock Holmes" (1985): Another "Young Sherlock" came earlier — in the persona of Nicholas Rowe — in this attraction from director

Barry Levinson, writer Chris Columbus and executive producer Steven Spielberg. There's a teenage Watson here, too, played by Alan Cox. "Without a Clue" (1988): While Dr. Watson (portrayed by Ben Kingsley) is real in the context of this comedy, "Holmes" actually is an actor (Michael Caine) pretending to be the sleuth in a "Remington Steele"-type gambit. And there's still a Moriarty (Paul Freeman). "Sherlock Holmes" (2009): Director Guy Ritchie's box-office hit pairs Robert

Downey Jr. and Jude Law as Holmes and Watson, who dabble in mysticism while seeking a missing man. Rachel McAdams and Mark Strong also star in the film, which yielded a 2011 sequel, "Sherlock Holmes: A Game of Shadows."

Checking in with JESSY SCHRAM

With the emotional complications surrounding her pregnancy, an airplane-related crisis is among the last things “Chicago Med’s” Dr. Hannah Asher needs now.

Nevertheless, the character played by Jessy Schram has to deal with the situation — which eventually affects a number of first responders — when NBC’s Wednesday One Chicago series unite again for a new, all-night crossover story on March 4. It also will stream on Peacock starting the next day. As has happened on such occasions before, the usual order of the Dick Wolf (“Law & Order”) produced shows will be altered, with “Chicago Fire” starting the evening, followed by “Chicago Med,” then “Chicago P.D.” in its usual slot. The tale marks a return by former “P.D.” co-stars Tracy Spiridakos (“Revolution”) and Jesse Lee Soffer (“As the World Turns”) as Hailey Upton and Jay Halstead.

“Firehouse 51 gets a call and goes to a grounded passenger jet ... what happens there sets off our crossover, and it’s not something we’ve seen before,” the pleasant Schram says. “Last year’s crossover was the first one I’d gotten to do, and the production was massive. This year, it seems to be even more. We’ve got explosions, we’ve got car chases, we’ve got investigations, we’ve got life-saving surgeries ... and while it’s bigger, it also hits harder [for the characters]. It’s on overdrive.”

That also means further personal developments for Asher with Dr. Dean Archer (played by Steven Weber, “13 Reasons Why”), the father of her forthcoming baby. “The theme of this, to me — especially in the ‘Med’ episode — is that we know the dangers and the sacrifices that first responders agreed to,” Schram reflects. “That’s what they signed up for, but we also see that it’s their families who signed up for it as well, because they love the first responders and also are affected. Hannah puts herself in a risky scenario that doesn’t go over well with Archer, and they butt heads.”

Also a frequent star of Hallmark Channel movies, some of which have incorporated her efforts as a singer-songwriter, Schram enjoys chances to work with actors from the other “Chicago” shows.

She’s also in both the “Fire” and “P.D.” episodes of the new

“Outlander” - Season 8 (Starz — March 7, Season Premiere)

Sophie Skelton, Richard Rankin, Lauren Lyle and Cesar Domboy also star.

‘The Flight of the Phoenix’ is grounded effectively

It's only in the air for a relatively small portion of its running time, but “The Flight of the Phoenix” is a thoroughly compelling survival drama thanks to an expert cast and typically gritty direction by Robert Aldrich (1967's “The Dirty Dozen”). Being shown Saturday, March 7, as part of the “31 Days of Oscar” festival on Turner Classic Movies, the 1965 drama casts James Stewart as the pilot of a cargo plane that crashes way off course in the Sahara desert in the picture's very tense opening sequence.

After taking stock of who is still alive and what the chances are of getting the aircraft operable again, an engineer (Hardy Kruger) among the passengers suggests fashioning a new plane out of the wreckage. Though others scoff at the idea initially, they eventually climb on board ... figuratively, and they hope literally as well. Richard Attenborough, Peter Finch, Ernest Borgnine, Ian Bannen, Dan Duryea and George Kennedy also are in the brawny saga; a 2004 remake had Dennis Quaid in the Stewart role.

“Suburgatory” (Netflix, streaming): Critically acclaimed during its three seasons on ABC, this 2011-14 comedy provided a TV home for a couple of stars who were noticed for other shows afterward, Jane Levy (later of NBC's “Zoey's Extraordinary Playlist”) and Jeremy Sisto (who continues on CBS and Paramount+'s “FBI”). They play a father and daughter who relocate from New York City to the suburbs, where they have a hard time finding their figurative place among their new neighbors. Co-stars include Ana Gasteyer (“Saturday Night Live”), Rex Lee (“Entourage”), Alan Tudyk (“Resident Alien”) and Cheryl Hines (“Curb Your Enthusiasm”).

“Waiting to Exhale” (Hulu, streaming): Actor Forest Whitaker made his directing debut with this popular 1995 ode to figurative sisterhood, with Whitney Houston (who also performs the hit theme song), Angela Bassett, Lela Rochon and Loretta Devine starring as women who share their joys and heartbreaks — particularly where men are concerned. Gregory Hines, Dennis Haysbert, Mykelti Williamson and Wendell Pierce are among those cast as fellows who have emotional impacts on the ladies; Wesley Snipes makes an uncredited appearance. The film is based on the novel by Terry McMillan, who co-wrote the screenplay.
